LEST WE FORGET

ON the fourth day of every July the American people, in a more or less frenetic manner, celebrate the birthday of the nation. It is a day of memories, and should be. Our fathers gave us a priceless form of government, and the long colonial striving against usurpation and tyranny helped our Jeffersons, John Adams and Lees and others to formulate the principles of pure republicanism which we boast of possessing today.

Let the eagle scream! Let oratory be broadcasted over the land! Let the red rockets glare and the bursting cracker boom! We have grown on and older until we are today 157 years old, a glorious "Union, one and indivisible."

But are we the same? Do we believe the same things? Are we tending along the same lines that other founders of the nation started? Our feet on that birthday of the nation in 1776? Let us look a moment and see.

On the Fourth of July, 1776, our forefathers signed that immortal Declaration of Independence, wherein was voiced the spirit of American democracy, that spirit which brooks no interference by tyrants or rulers and recognizes no master save only those who compose the nation.

In 1787 the new nation adopted that world-surprising constitution which guarantees the freedom and equality of all men, and that "government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

The America of our forefathers was an America of independence, of the fullest, freest privilege to every man, the only limitation being that one man's privilege should not overlap or interfere with the privilege of another, or of the citizenry generally. Liberty, not license, was what we wanted, and what we were guaranteed.

Are we the same Americans in spirit today that we were

COLORED MAN TAKES POISON TO END LIFE

Thomas Wilson, 72, Despondent Over Finances, Uses Strychnine

Despondent over his depressed financial condition, Thomas Wilson, 72, colored, ended his own life by taking 20 grains of strychnine at his home, 728 Maplewood-ave at 6:45 a. m. Sunday.

A well known character, it is reported that Wilson was to have been evicted from his home Monday. This is said to have prompted his act, although neighbors said that they believed he had been contemplating taking his life for some time.

Two neighbors, Forest Tomlinson and Guy Young, heard groans emanating from Wilson's home about 6:15 a. m. Sunday. They went to the house and found Wilson lying across the bed. He was fully dressed, having arisen about an hour before. "What have you done Tom?" Tomlinson asked. "Why, what makes you ask me that?" Wilson is reported to have answered. Tomlinson wished to send for a physician but Wilson would not allow him, saying that he only had a few minutes to live. He died before Coroner C. E. Bowers arrived.

Dr. Bowers in pronouncing his death said he believed that Wilson had taken about 20 grains of strychnine. It is believed he got up about 5:15 a. m., dressed and then took the poison, as he was seen sitting on the front porch of his home about 5:45.

Neighbors report that he had been worrying over his depressed financial condition for some time. A close friend of Wilson said that he had the poison in his possession for several weeks and had hinted that he intended to end his life. His wife died Jan. 30, 1931.

A laborer, Wilson was born at Shelbyville, Ky., March 14, 1861. His only survivors are a son, Thomas Wilson, Jr., whose address is unknown, and a daughter, Mrs. Linda Bet of Columbus.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at the Rinehart funeral home at 10 a. m. with Rev. B. R. Reed officiating. Burial will be made in Forest cemetery by M. S. Rinehart.

Mary and Doug To Separate

Announcement of Contemplated Divorce Made By Mrs. Fairbanks.

HOLLYWOOD, July 3.—Mary Pickford will give Douglas Fairbanks a divorce if he desires one. The famous screen actress probably will not of her own volition seek a divorce but if Fairbanks desires the dissolution of their ideal marriage, she will secure the decree as quietly as possible on grounds of incompatibility.

This was the status today of the marital affairs of "America's sweetheart," and her dashing film star husband.

Sale of their palatial $400,000 Pickfair estate, their dream home, will be accomplished as soon as possible.

Miss Pickford will continue to make Hollywood her home and will continue her work in pictures. Fairbanks is expected to make his future home in Europe.

Heart broken over the turn of affairs which has led to a separation likely to become permanent through divorce, Miss Pickford was in seclusion today.

A brief statement confirmed the prospective sale of Pickfair and admitted the possibility of divorce.

CITY PLANNING QUIET FOURTH; OTHERS ACTIVE

No Celebration of Annual Event Here; Many to Visit Ashville

OTHER TOWNS BUSY

Washington C. H. Planning Gala Holiday

What are you going to do the Fourth of July? As far as celebrations are concerned, Circleville residents must seek diversion elsewhere.

Another 'safe and sane' Independence Day will be observed here with flags on display in front of business houses and residences and the sound of fire-crackers, only noise disturbing the holiday.

No celebration of any kind is planned here and as a result many persons will go out of town to celebrate the day. Many of them as usual will go to Ashville where that village's active Community Club, with the aid of the townspeople, is planning another mammoth celebration with fireworks in the evening as a feature. Games and contests will be played during the day with a big parade late in the morning.

BAND SCHEDULED

A definite program has not been announced by the Club's committee but another good time is promised. Fred J. Hines and his band will be on hand to provide music and if pointers are taken from celebrations in the past few years, another gala Fourth of July is certain to be observed in Ashville.

To go out of the county, one cannot go far wrong in seeking diversion. Chillicothe, Lancaster, and Washington C. H., are all planning programs for sometime during the day. Various clubs and patriotic organizations are planning Chillicothe's fête while at Lancaster the American Legion with merchants participating will have charge of the program at the fair grounds. The Lancaster program is in the afternoon and evening.

The Washington C. H. celebration is expected to be one of the largest in southcentral Ohio. Action begins at 9 a. m. and lasts until midnight. A coon dog chase will start the activities with entries from many parts of the state listed.

There will be horse and pony races, a mule handicap and novelty events.

A boxing show will take place and the fireworks display is scheduled at 10 p. m.

LAURELVILLE ALSO

Laurelville's business men are also planning observance of the holiday with a program in the evening. Games will be played with free attractions and contests.

INVESTIGATE BUS ACCIDENT

Three Holiday Travelers Die When Buckeye Stages Bus Turns Over.

29 ARE INJURED

Assistant University Instructor Among Those Killed.

MT. VERNON, July 3.—Investigation was launched by Knox-co officials today into a bus catastrophe near here yesterday when three persons were killed and 29 others were injured as a Buckeye Stages bus, packed with holiday travelers, turned over on the Three C's highway.

The dead are:

Arthur B. Bankhardt, 26, of Columbus, an assistant instructor in the chemistry department at Ohio State university.

Miss Josephine Vachuska, 40, of Cleveland.

An unidentified man, who died of a broken neck.

Several of the injured were believed seriously hurt. The bus enroute from Columbus to Cleveland, plunged into a 10-foot ditch and upset when the driver, Charles Kinley of Columbus, attempted to go around an automobile driven by Moses Steele of Wellston, O.

The accident occurred on Ebenzer Hill, several miles north of here. The bus toppled from the embankment and landed upside down, crushing the roof in splinters.

An inquiry was placed under way at once by Knox-co Sheriff F. D. Mason and County Coroner Robert L. Eastman. They were joined by M. C. Kibben, superintendent of operations for the bus company.

Several passengers told county investigators that the driver sounded his horn several times and that the car ahead pulled out of the way to let the bus pass, only to swing sharply back into the center of the highway and force the bus off the road near a sharp bend.

Steele, the driver of the automobile ahead, was expected to be interrogated today about the crash.

State Representative William M. Boyd of Cleveland, and Miss Agnes Heskett, of Columbus, former Ohio State university homecoming queen, were among those slightly injured.

The injured were treated in Mercy hospital here, at Mt. Vernon Sanitarium, and at various Columbus hospitals. Rescuers worked an hour extricating passengers from the wreckage. Four ambulances were forced into use.

The bus crash in which three persons were killed and other automobile accidents in Ohio over the week-end brought an accident toll of at least ten deaths, an International News Service survey showed today.

No Medicine To Prevent Gallstones

If Condition Becomes Serious, Operation Is Best Procedure

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D. United States senator from New York Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

A FRIEND of mine recently had an operation for the removal of gallstones. During his convalescence he was told that forty-two stones had been found. The patient was amazed and could not believe it possible. To convince him, the surgeon showed him the specimen jar containing the stones. Then and only then was my friend fully convinced of the truth of the story.

Gallstones may vary in number from one to fifty, or even more, in rare instances a hundred. When many gallstones are present they are usually small, smooth and round. When few are found they are likely to be large, rough and irregular in shape. The latter cause more pain and may cause frequent attacks of gall-bladder colic.

Symptoms of Gallstones

Not all cases of gallstones are painful. The pain is caused when the stone moves, trying to leave the gall-bladder. This sets up a muscle reflex, leading to severe pain over the lower borders of the right ribs. The pain may be referred to the right shoulder and back. It is often confused with rheumatic and neuralgic pain.

Sufferers from gallstones complain of indigestion, nausea, loss of appetite and constipation. The symptoms are more marked when the stones interfere with the passage of bile. When this happens the skin of the patient becomes yellow.

Normally the bile leaves the gall-bladder and enters the first part of the small intestine. A stone may enter the bile duct and prevent the passage of bile. When this happens the bile overflows and is poured into the blood stream. This leads to "jaundice" or discoloration of the skin.

Neglect of gallstones leads to inflammation of the gall-bladder. This is known medically as "cholecystitis." "Cholelithiasis" is the technical name for gallstones.

Use of Patent Medicines

I am often asked whether gallstones can be cured by operation alone. This is the only method of getting rid of the offending substance. Do not be misled by statements concerning the value of certain patent medicines recommended for the cure of gallstones. They are not approved by the medical profession. As yet we have no medicine that will prevent gallstones, or dissolve them.

If you are a sufferer from gallstones and operation has been advised, do not delay. It is a dangerous affliction to neglect. In the hands of a competent surgeon, the operation is a simple one and need not be feared.

It will comfort you to know that millions of men and women have lived long and comfortable lives without knowing they had gallstones. It is only when they cause definite trouble that they need attention.

solver, one-half mile east of Laurelville, was struck and badly damaged. The rafters were torn loose from the top of the house and the floor was splintered.

The chimney on the house of a Mr. Greenleaf near Laurelville was torn off by lightning.

Every telephone in Laurelville and Adelphi was put out of order by the lightning. Charles Sampson, repair chief at the Citizens Telephone Co. reported. Several poles were down and trees were blown down on the wires throughout the county, causing about 200 phones to be out of order. Workmen of the telephone company labored Sunday to clean up the damage.

A large tree blew down on the frame house of Walter Morrison in Ashville caving in the roof and damaging it considerably.

The Southern Ohio Electric Co. did not report any damage.

Dr. H. R. Clarke, local weather observer, said that .85 of an inch of rain fell in the downpour Saturday and .18 of an inch fell Sunday. Coupled with the 1.81 inches of precipitation Friday, a total of 2.84 inches of rain has fallen in Circleville during the past three days. The Scioto river has only risen about one foot, Dr. Clarke reports.

Residents six miles below Circleville Monday reported that only enough rain fell to settle the dust in their region over the week-end.

The showers brought relief from the heat, the mercury failing to go higher than the 92 mark Sunday and falling to 60 during the night. Saturday's high mark was 96, Dr. Clarke reported.

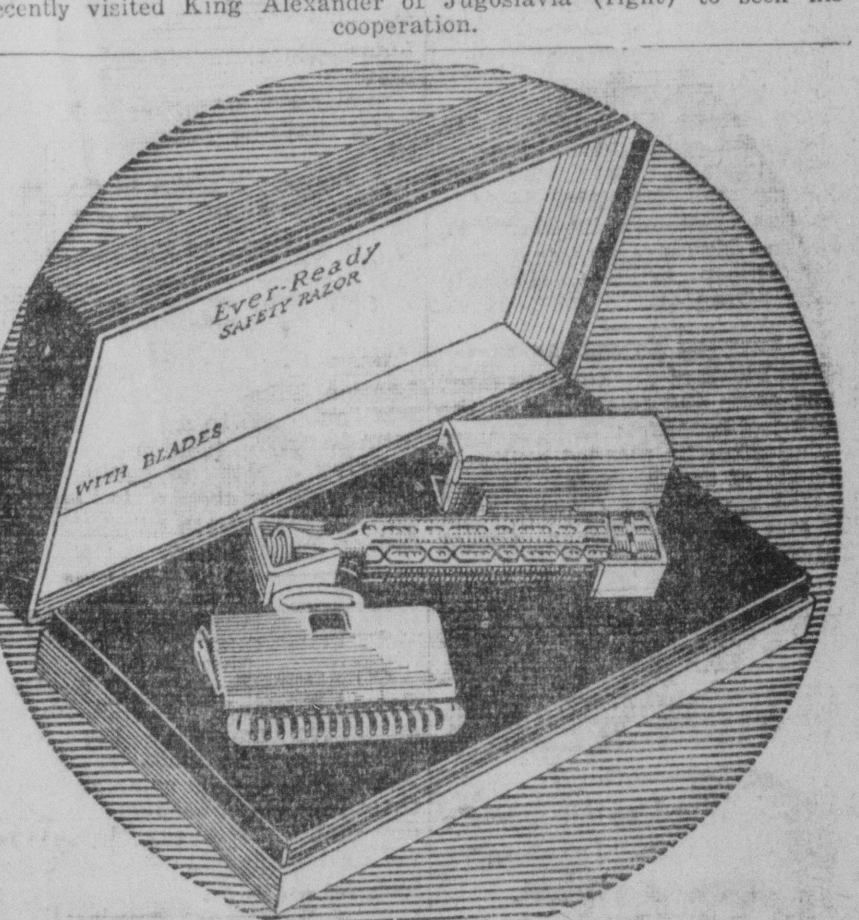

Chicle From Tree Bark

Chicle is a milky product obtained from the bark of the sapodilla plum or bully tree. It is collected, exposed to the air for a short time, and then boiled until the water is practically all evaporated. The residue, a sticky, pasty mass, is melted, and kneaded into solid blocks for shipment. In 1921 the United States imported 6,953,643 pounds of chicle, valued at $3,562,113. The greatest quantity came from Yucatan and British Honduras.

WASHINGTON SPURT FEATURES LEAGUES

NEW YORK, July 1.—Washington's spurt featured the pennant races in June. The Nats won 20 games and lost only seven and took the lead in the American league scramble while the Yanks were winning 18 and losing 13.

The Giants set the pace in the national league, winning 19 and losing 9, while Pittsburgh dropped 18 out of 30 and dropped from first to third place. The Cardinals hung up only 14 victories against 13 defeats but stayed close to the pace by their ability to whip New York. They have won all seven of their contests with the Giants.

SPLIT WITH BROWNS

Jimmy Foxx whacked 13 homers during the month and took a big lead in the home run derby. He hit No. 20 yesterday as the A's divided a pair of slugfests with St. Louis. With Burns and Storti each getting four hits including a homer, the Browns took the opener 12 to 11 by scoring 17 runs in the ninth. Rube Walberg went the route for the A's in the nightcap and won 11 to 7 with the aid of Mike Higgins, who hit five for five. Higgins also got three hits in the opener.

Washington took undisputed possession of first place when Alvin Crowder won a 2 to 1 duel from Tommy Bridges of Detroit while the Yankees lost a 13 to 12 slugfest to Cleveland when the Indians scored four runs in the ninth. This was a wild and woolly affair marked by 28 hits, 18 bases on balls, seven errors and four hits by 'Bad News' Hale of the Indians.

The Indians are now tied for fourth place with the White Sox, who lost to the Red Sox 4 to 2 in a duel between Ted Lyons and Henry Johnson. Johnson allowed but four hits and pitched to only 28 batters.

DEAN, MEDWICK AID

The combination of Jerome (Dizzy) Dean and 'Ducky' Wuckey Medwick steered the Cardinals to a 1 to 0 triumph over the Giants. Dean held the New Yorkers to six hits while Hal Schumacher, New York's youthful ace, held St. Louis to five blows and was ruined only by Medwick's homer in the ninth inning.

The Cards now trail the Giants by only 2 1-2 games.

DEAN HALTS INDIAN NINE

Right-hander Gives Four Hits and Fans Nine in 3 to 1 Night Contest.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 1.—Paul Dean was right last night and the Columbus Red Birds gained the verdict in the second game of the present series. Dean gave four hits and fanned nine men to win 3 to 1.

It was his wild pitch that spelled defeat for the Columbus team in Thursday's night's game but he came back with a vengeance to stand the Indians on their heads last night.

The Birds did all their scoring prior to the fifth frame with Jim Turner, right-hander, driven from the box in the fourth.

The teams close their short series with a rubber game tonight. The pitchers are uncertain although Ed Heusser or Ralph Judd may chuck for the league-leaders who gained a full game on the second place St. Paul team.

Summer Safety Pointers Given

WASHINGTON, D. C. July 1.—Safe and sane vacations are urged by the First Aid and Life Saving Service of the American Red Cross, which offers the following suggestions:

Sunburn — Dangerous. Acquire tan gradually. Avoid mid-day rays. Graduate the period of exposure a few minutes each day until skin is toughened and tanned. Until such time make a practice of wearing a shirt, bathrobe or other covering at beach except when actually in water. Calamine lotion gives considerable relief and may be safely applied to the skin several times a day. Especially avoid a burn upon a burn.

Swimming—Know your swimming place. Explore thoroughly for hidden rocks, holes and glass—but not with your bare feet. Never swim alone—swimming in twos is more fun and far safer. Never dive in less than six feet of water, and make allowance for changes in tidalwater depths. Always wait at least two hours after eating before entering the water.

Drinking Water — Take no chances. If in the least doubt as to purity, boil. In some states, health department signs posted at springs and other sources indicate whether the water is fit or unfit for human consumption.

Food—Food poisoning is of frequent occurrence in the warm months, due to the rapidity with which food spoils. Prepare small amounts at a time. Chicken, fish and potatoes are particularly likely to make one ill, if not properly refrigerated. Protect from possible contamination. Do not eat excessively or when overheated.

Fire—Always bury or quench the embers before retiring or leaving the camp site.

Poison Ivy—Learn to recognize this plant, and then carefully avoid it. Ivy, oak and sumac poisoning are caused by an irritating oil present on the leaves. Poisoning results readily from contact with smoke from the burning leaves. The skin should be washed immediately and thoroughly with warm water and soap. If poisoning occurs anyway, apply calamine lotion, or a solution of ferric chloride. Another good treatment is the application of dressings wet with a solution of Epsom salts, as strong as can be made with cold water; keep dressings wet. If at all severe, consult a physician.

Insects—Flowers of sulphur applied to the skin helps to prevent chigger bites. Mosquitoes may be kept away for a couple of hours by rubbing a few drops of oil of lavender over the exposed surfaces—but this does not take the place of adequate screening or netting.

The itching can be relieved by applying calamine lotion several times daily. Inflammation from other insect bites can be relieved by applying compresses wet with cold Epsom salts or baking soda solutions.

First Aid Kit—Keep stocked and conveniently at hand in fishing kit, automobile or kitchen. Cuts and abrasions are among the commonest of vacations accidents. Small wounds should be given prompt attention. Apply half-strength tincture of iodine to wounds, allow to dry, and apply a sterile dressing.

Driving—Have a thorough mechanical inspection of the car made before starting on the trip. Drive carefully and give heed to speed limits and official road signs.

Remember that a regard for the safety and welfare of self and others is the first rule of good sportsmanship.

TWO copy boys on the New York Times were having an acrimonious discussion one afternoon as they sat on their bench next to the city editor's desk.

"I guess they never named any towns for you," said one.
"Maybe not," said the other; "but there's a town up yonder in New England named for you, all right."
"What town is that?" asked the first boy, falling into the trap.
"Marblehead."
At this point the opening blow was struck.

LOVABLE ENIGMAS

These puzzles we have married! How disturbingly efficient they are. Patiently they sit across the dinner table from us and listen to our evening complaints — short-handed at the office, chief cranky, customer spoiled golf date, stenographer late, letters misfiled — women have all the best of it! Then they smile riddles.

If you could see the little woman in the morning after you leave for the office! Children to bundle off to school, meals to plan, marketing to do, laundry to send, buttons to put on, tears to mend, dozens of trips to the front and back doors, lunch, squabbles to settle, a cut finger to bandage.

At night, she meets you in a chic little gown you never saw before. Junior struts new shoes. There are new towels in the bathroom. There is an unfamiliar and delicious dish to tempt your appetite.

Where does she find time to be company, purchasing agent, vice-president in charge of cooking, general manager of sewing, teaching and all the rest?

Foreign Trade Gains

ALTHOUGH encouraging improvement of American foreign trade during the first quarter of the present year is shown in figures compiled by the United States chamber of commerce, there are some significant features that will bear studying.

Most of the improvement was in trade with Latin America and other smaller countries. Exports to countries with which in normal times the United States has its greatest trade showed short declines. Exports to the United Kingdom dropped 32 per cent, while those to Germany were off 25 per cent. Trade with Russia fell off 59 per cent. Other declines were: The Netherlands, 20 per cent; Spain, 13; Denmark, 38; Switzerland, 35; Japan, 48; China, 47; India, 54; Dutch East Indies, 45.

The increases registered ranged from 1 per cent for Argentina to 70 per cent for Poland and Danzig, "a greater gain than at any time since 1929," according to the chamber's review. Other increases included: Brazil, 7 per cent; Colombia, 29; Venezuela, 14; Dutch West Indies, 64; Dominican Republic, 10; Guatemala, 3; Costa Rica, 7; Salvador, 21; Italy, 3 and Egypt, 11.

American imports during the same period showed a decided upturn, "the increase ranging from 4 per cent for The Netherlands to 304 per cent for Salvador." Imports from China increased 6 per cent and those from Russia 9 per cent.

The figures seem to show that notwithstanding so-called tariff barriers, which the London economic conference is seeking to eliminate, world trade is beginning to move. This may indicate that tariffs have not been as important a factor in the world slump as they are blamed with having been.

What caused the falling off in exports to world markets that formerly took large quantities of American goods is a question that might engage the attention of experts. Some of these nations, but not all of them, are countries which owe the United States war debts.

A Hopeful Sign

WITH employment and wages increasing, the country begins to look hopefully for signs of a decline in relief needs. So far, no pronounced change in the general situation relating to relief has taken place.

A development not without encouragement, however, and one which may prove significant has occurred in Illinois, a state in which relief needs are pressing. When it became necessary for the state to assume a large part of the burden that had rested on local communities because of the exhaustion of the latter's resources, a sales tax law estimated to yield $60,000,000 a year was enacted. This recently was declared unconstitutional and it became necessary for the governor to submit a new proposal. This now has been done. It calls for only $35,000,000 and carries a provision that its relief features are to remain in effect only until January 1, next.

Business improvement is proceeding at a rate, officials believe, which will permit local communities to take over the whole relief problem after that date. This is distinctly encouraging, and it raises the probability that other states before long may find their relief problems easing.

Khaki Shirt Drive

SEVEN million Khaki Shirts are ready to march on Washington and forcibly take over the government.

So says Art J. Smith, head of the organization which maintains headquarters in Philadelphia. He further volunteers the information that his "troops" are in possession of rifles, artillery, machine guns and tanks. He boasts, "We will have 10,000,000 men in our outfit by July." And "When we are ready to march, we will take over everything—local, state and national governments."

Sure, establishment of a fascist dictatorship is the purpose of the movement. "I don't say I'll be dictator," modestly says Mr. Smith, "but the Khaki Shirts will select the dictator for America. I'm quite sure they will select me."

It is too bad that congress and the president have wasted so much time and energy in trying to solve the nation's problems, now that the task is to be taken over by the Khaki Shirts. The latter ought to allow a little time for the new measure to be tested.

Then, too, this is not very good marching weather. It might be better on that account to postpone the project to cooler time.

"MARY FAITH"

by Beatrice Burton

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Mary Faith, young and comely orphan, is secretary to Mark Nesbit, wealthy young business man. She informs Mark that she is leaving her position to marry Kimberley Farrell, handsome young lawyer, to whom she has been engaged for some time. Invited to Kim's house for dinner, Mary Faith is greeted coldly by his mother. Later, Kim starts Mary Faith by breaking his engagement and asking for the ring. The next morning, Mary Faith informs her co-workers that she is not to be married. She asks them to take back their presents. After working late, Mark Nesbit takes Mary Faith to dinner and home to her boarding house in his car. Slowly Mary Faith learns to live her life without Kim. When Mark Nesbit injures his ankle, Mary Faith is driven to his country home to take dictation. She meets his mother and enjoys the charming home life of the Nesbits. Jean Bartlett, Mary Faith's office friend, laughingly tells her she should marry Mark Nesbit. Mark, now back at the office, asks Mary Faith to help him select a ring for his sister. In the store she sees Kim Farrell. Kim, standing with a girl, approaches Mary Faith. She greets him casually. Driving home, Mark Nesbit tells Mary Faith he loves her. She informs him of her broken engagement to Kim Farrell, and that she will never again love anyone. Mrs. Puckett, Mary Faith's landlady, chides Mary Faith on her romance with the wealthy Mark Nesbit.

CHAPTER XIII

She sat there thinking things out. Of course her job was gone. It would be impossible to go back to Nesbit's after today. That was certain.

It was also certain that it would be a long time before she found another position that was as good and paid as well.

"If you and Mr. Nesbit had words, how did it happen that he brought you home in his car?" the voice of Mrs. Puckett cut across her thoughts.

"Dinner's served, ma'am," said Agnes from the doorway. But Mrs. Puckett had made up her mind to get an answer to her question. After dinner she came lumbering up the stairs to Mary Faith's room.

"I've been putting two and two together," she said, sitting down heavily on the side of the bed. "And I've made up my mind that that man asked you to marry him—or, at least, he tried to make love to you, didn't he?"

Mary Faith was sitting at her dressing table, polishing her nails. She bent her head lower over them. "He did ask me to marry him."

Mrs. Puckett threw her plump hands into the air. "I knew it," she said quickly. "I knew it! And you turned him down?"

Mary Faith nodded.

"Well, all the fools aren't dead yet, it seems," Mrs. Puckett groaned. "Mary Faith, let me give you some advice. . . . You go down to that office in the morning and tell that man you've changed your mind. Tell him you'll marry him and have something in your life besides a dirty office all day long and a boarding house full of funny people to come home to at night! And you'd better get down on your knees this minute and pray to heaven that he doesn't change his mind about you over-night!"

It was the first time in her life that she had ever spoken of her house as anything but a family hotel and a first-class one, at that. There was a sparkle of tears behind her steel-rimmed glasses and her old "in" worked.

A knock came on the door, and then Agnes's voice: "Miss Fenton, there's a gentleman downstairs to see you."

Mary Faith opened the door.

"It's Mr. Farrell, ma'am. Mr. Farrell that used to come to see you, you know," Agnes was smiling. She had always liked Kim and given him extra portions of cream and dessert when he came to the house for meals.

"Close the door, Agnes, and wait there in the hall for a minute."

It was Mrs. Puckett who spoke.

"So he's turned up again like a bad penny—just at the wrong time!" she said in a half whisper as soon as the door had closed upon Agnes. "I wouldn't see him if I were you, Mary Faith. Don't think that I don't know how he's treated you, because I do. I know he threw you overboard three months ago, not caring what happened to you! And now that you're on your feet again and have a chance to marry a man with money and position, back he comes to make you miserable again! . . . Let me go down and tell him you're never going to see him again."

Mary Faith shook her head. Her face had gone dead white and her eyes were like blue-black water.

"I'm going down," she said, and she went.

Kim was waiting for her at the foot of the stairs. His fur-collared overcoat was on the hall table, and he was turning and twisting his hat in his hands as he watched her come down the last flight of steps.

Her heart seemed to be beating all over her body and there was a singing in her ears; but she greeted him casually as if she had been seeing him every night for months.

"Hello, Kim."

"Get your coat," he said. "Get your hat and coat. I want you to go for a drive."

Her wraps hung on the hall rack where she had put them before dinner while Miss Halperin was using her room. She took them down and put them on with hands that were shaking.

"All right, Kim, I'm ready."

The minute the front door had closed upon them he burst forth: "Mary Faith, I've been like a crazy man for the last three hours! To see you walk into that store and let that fellow buy a ring for you! To see my girl with another man! Good Lord, I couldn't stand it, Mary Faith!"

He opened the door of his little car and they got into it. They sat there looking at each other in the flickering radiance of the street lamp that stood in front of Mrs. Puckett's house.

"I wore your ring for a good many years, Kim. I wore it until you took it away from me," Mary Faith said quietly.

He nodded, his hands pressed to his temples. "I know—I know. Don't talk to me about it. Don't tell me what a fool I was."

Suddenly he dropped his hands from his face and caught Mary Faith by her wrists.

"You can believe me or not, but I love you more this minute than I ever did in my life before."

"Only because you think I'm someone else's," Mary Faith answered him. "You haven't wanted to see me for three months, Kim. You've been perfectly happy with that girl. You were perfectly happy with her tonight in that store where you were buying her a mesh bag."

Her pulses were still now, and she could think clearly once again.

"You're what Mrs. Puckett would call 'a dog in the manger,'" she said. "You don't want me, yourself, and you don't want anybody else to have me."

Kim groaned. "Don't talk like that, Mary Faith. . . . I swallow my pride and come here to try to fix things up between us—and you won't even listen to me."

He was like a child, begging to be forgiven. He laid his head down on the back of the seat and buried his face in her shoulder. Mary Faith sat very still.

"You don't care for that fellow," he said in a muffled voice. "You couldn't have forgotten all about me in just a few weeks. You aren't like that, Mary Faith. And even if he's given you the biggest diamond in Armbruster's store, you're still my girl."

Mary Faith clasped and unclasped her ringless hands.

"I wore your diamond for a long time, Kim," she reminded him; "and I'd still be wearing it if you hadn't taken it away from me—because of that girl."

"Now, let's not talk about her!" he said irritably. "She doesn't mean a thing in my life any more, and she knows it. I haven't seen her more than three or four times in the last month. I haven't seen anybody—I've been restless and down in the dumps for a long time. But I didn't know what ailed me until you came walking into Armbruster's tonight with that fellow. Then I knew I'd been missing you all the time."

He lifted his blond head and looked at her. The light from the street lamp shone into his face. He was anxious and grave, very unlike his usual debonaire self.

"Lord, if you only knew what I've been through the last three hours!" he said, shaking his head. "I'd asked Janet to have dinner with me, and I had to go through with it. I sat there looking at her and thinking of you. . . . Mary Faith, you've got to take me back. You've got to believe I love you."

She did believe him. She could see that he really had been suffering for three hours as she had suffered for three months. And pity and tenderness welled up in her all at once so that it was hard for her to speak.

"Kim, listen to me—I'm not engaged to Mark Nesbit. That ring we were picking out wasn't a ring for me but a Christmas present for his sister, Judith. I've never thought of marrying anybody but you. I've never cared for anyone else—and if you never had come back to me I'd probably have spent my whole life right here in River Street, waiting for you!"

She gave a shaky little laugh. "You know it too. That's the worst of it, Kim. You're too sure of me."

He shook his head. "No, I'm not sure of you," he said; "and that's why I've made up my mind to marry you tomorrow."

He put his arms around her and pulled her close to him. He pressed back her head with one swift hand and his face came down over hers, blotting out the stars, as he kissed her.

It seemed to Mary Faith then that she must have known all along that Kim would come back to her like this.

She thought, "If I hadn't known it I couldn't have gone on the way I have."

"I haven't had any vacation this year," Kim said presently, "so the firm probably won't kick if I take a couple of weeks now for a honeymoon. . . . I'll drive around here for you at ten tomorrow morning and we'll go downtown for the license. You can have some things packed and be ready to leave then, can't you?"

Mary Faith nodded dreamily, her cheek against his. She wondered if he realized the power he had over her. The power to bend her will to his in small things as well as big important ones. He had had that power the first night she ever saw him across the tables in Mrs. Puckett's dining room when he had made her break an engagement for the next night and make one with him instead.

He had that power now as he sat beside her, planning her life for her. He would always have it.

With an aroused anticipation of the rare treat in store the lovers of minstrelsy await the coming of Van Arnam's Minstrels, which is the attraction announced to appear at the Grand Theater Sunday and Monday, July 2 and 3rd. Van Arnam's Minstrels, justly acclaimed the greatest organization of its kind ever offered the American public, includes 25 of America's best known minstrel stars.

They form an aggregation of unsurpassed comedians, sweet-voiced songsters, talented musicians, soloists, skillful dancers and scores of gloom-destroyers who offer a program of humor, mirth, happiness and revelry.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Vina Delmar's "Pick Up," published originally as a short story in Red Book Magazine, has been produced in film by E. P. Schulberg for Paramount under the same title, and comes to the Cliftona Theatre Sunday and Monday with Sylvia Sidney and George Raft in leading roles.

Like "Bad Girl" and other of Miss Delmar's stories, "Pick Up" centers around a boy and girl from the streets of the city, who are buffeted about by social and economic laws, but ultimately find happiness in each other's arms.

Sylvia is the girl—a youngster married to a man who turns out to be a criminal, and who, when he goes to prison, frames her so that she goes too. But she is released after a couple of years, while he remains behind to serve six more. Broke, cold, and soaked by a rainstorm, she seeks shelter in an empty cab. The driver, Raft, is convinced of the genuineness of her pleas.

Soon they are deeply in love.

Machado's Dictatorship of Cuba Menaced by Underground Revolt

Assassination and Reprisal by Bullet and Bomb Feature Sub Rosa Warfare for Control of Island. Terrorism Stalks Beautiful Havana.

While Cuban exiles in New York are making plans for the overthrow of President Gerardo Machado's dictatorship of Cuba, a sinister underground warfare is being prosecuted in the island paradise between the Machadistas, supporters of the President, and a group of societies, opposed to the government, which have combined with the common aim of acquiring control of the country. Dr. Carlos de la Torre, former professor at the University of Havana, has been elected president of a new Cuban revolutionary junta, composed of prominent exiles, among whom are Dr. Miguel M. Gomez, former Mayor of Havana; Colonel Mendez Penate, leader of the Nationalist Party; General Mario G. Menocal, former President of Cuba and leader of the last revolution against the Machado government. During the last few weeks, a reign of terror has existed in the island. Shootings and bombings are so common as to no longer be marveled at. The secret police of President Machado are accused by the revolutionaries of using American gangster methods in getting rid of their enemies. During the week before Easter no less than 50 deaths by violence are reported to have occurred in Havana. It is charged that the government is using the dreaded "ley de fuga" (law of flight) to murder political opponents. But the Cuban administration denies everything—even to the existence of a revolutionary movement.

WOULD YOU BUY IT AGAIN?

When your answer is NO it is never a bargain

Unless it gives you your money's worth in value, and the satisfaction in use which you expect, no product is ever a bargain.

Yet many of these "would-be" bargains are in the stores today!

Packaged products you have never heard about, or seen advertised. Brands put out by manufacturers whose names mean nothing to you.

In many cases the only appeal of these products is a "bargain" price; their sole claim to merit, a clerk's promise that they are "just as good" as the better-known brands you ask for.

Any time you are persuaded to buy them you may be wasting your money.

In unfamiliar packages now urged upon you, there is often cheap merchandise—the offering of manufacturers who have gone too far in their efforts to make your money buy more quantity. Products in which quality has been sacrificed to make a low price still lower.

When you shop today, look at the label as well as the price—for a well-known label is a guarantee of quality. The genuine bargains are among the brands you recognize! Many of them now cost less than they have in years. ●

Pickaway County's Daily NEWSpaper

"MARY FAITH"

by Beatrice Burton

SYNOPSIS

Mary Faith and Kimberley Farrell have been engaged for some time. Mary Faith, beautiful young orphan, gives up her position as secretary to Mark Nesbit when Kim sets their wedding date. His attitude changes brusquely when his mother objects. The latter treats Mary Faith coldly. Heartbroken, Mary Faith returns to her office and breaks the news to her co-workers. Mark, taken ill, has Mary Faith driven to his country home, daily, for two weeks. He tells her of his love for her. She halts him saying she will never love anyone as she did Kim. While in a jewelry store with Mark, selecting a Christmas ring for his sister, Mary Faith meets Kim with a girl. Next morning Kim calls at Mary Faith's boarding house. He assures her of his love and proposes immediate marriage. Mary Faith melts in his arms.

CHAPTER XIV

"I'll telephone Dr. Pomeroy tonight and ask him if he'll meet us in the chapel at eleven o'clock," his voice ran on. "And I'll ask the Maldons to come down. We're supposed to have a couple of witnesses, aren't we?"

Dr. Pomeroy was the rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, where she and Kim had always planned to be married. But who were the Maldons? She never had heard Kim mention them.

"Who are the Maldons, Kim?" she asked.

"He thought for a minute or two. 'Why, I guess you haven't met them,' he said at last. 'I haven't known them so very long, myself, but they're pals of mine. Jack works down at our place. He and Claire have been married only two or three months. You'll like Claire, Mary Faith. She's a grand person.'"

Mary Faith stirred in her arms. "I'd like to ask Jean Bartlett to the wedding. She's my best friend"—she was beginning when he stopped her.

"No, we're not going to have any of your friend Nesbit's office help around," he said firmly. "You're through with all that crowd, so forget them. I'm not going to tell even my mother about the wedding until it's all over. Now, let me tell you where I thought we'd spend our two weeks."

She thought back to listen.

"You remember that aunt of mine who lives down in Garrettsville, Mary Faith?"

"Aunt Ella Goad, you mean?" Mary Faith remembered Aunt Ellen Goad very well. Having once seen Aunt Ella, you could never forget her.

She was a plump and pleasant person with a passion for moving pictures, library books, armchairs, and coffee and cake between meals. Mary Faith had always liked her, and she said so now.

"Well, she's come up to town to stay with my mother over the holidays," said Kim, "and I'm going to ask her to lend us her house down in Garrettsville for the next two weeks."

"Kim! Do you think she'll let us have it?" Mary Faith's eyes shone in the darkness. "Won't it be lovely if she does—I can cook all the things you like to eat, and get your bath ready in the mornings and put the collar buttons in your shirt!—And you can build the fires and shovel the snow off the walks so that I can get out of the yard when I want to go to market!"

"I'll drive you there in the car so that you won't get your cute feet all cold and wet," Kim said. "I'm going to take doggone good care of my wife."

"All right, you take care of me then."

"I'm going to," Kim said, and he said it gravely as if he were making himself a solemn promise.

"I'm leaving," said Mary Faith.

Mr. McClintock was playing checkers with Allie Brock when Mary Faith went back into the house an hour later. He sat facing the hall door and he saw her as she started up the stairs.

She turned her head and smiled at him. And he looked at her, blinking a little, as if he were looking at a sunrise.

Before she went to bed that night Mary Faith washed her hair and "did" her nails. Then she packed two suitcases with things for her honeymoon and laid out her clothes for the next day. A hunter's-green suit trimmed with gray fox; a little green hat; pale gray stockings and slippers and handbag; a gray chiffon blouse.

It was one o'clock in the morning when she went to bed and she was awake again at half past six. It was still dark but the dawn wind blew in through the open windows and there was a line of silver in the sky above the house-tops on the other side of River Street.

"My wedding day," she thought, taking a long deep breath of it before she put down her windows. "This is the last time I'll ever get up in this room."

But there was no regret, no sadness, in the thought. She looked forward to her life with Kim with nothing but happiness in her heart.

The old house was like a tomb, as it always was on winter mornings, and she shivered as she ran down to the bathroom on the second floor. You had to get up at the crack of dawn if you wanted to take a morning bath at Mrs. Puckett's, for the "paying guests" all got up around seven and fairly fought for the bathroom.

When Mary Faith, fresh as a flower, came out into the hall a half hour later, Mrs. Puckett, with her bath towel and a cake of pink soap in her hand, was waiting just outside the door.

"I hope you didn't use all the hot water, Mary Faith," she said. "What you you so early for?"

"I'm going down to the office to get all my things—and I want to get away from it before everybody arrives," Mary Faith answered.

"Mrs. Puckett, I'm going to marry Kim Farrell this morning."

Mrs. Puckett stared at her from under her wrinkled eyelids for a long moment. Then she shook her head.

"I haven't a word to say, Mary Faith," she announced. "I haven't a word to say!"

But when Mary Faith was halfway up the stairs she said something else.

"I hope you'll be happy," was what she said. "I hope you'll be happy. I pray for it, Mary Faith. I certainly do."

The clock in Mark Nesbit's empty office was striking eight when Mary Faith walked into her own little room that morning.

She had brought her hat box—round leather affair—with her and into it she packed the contents of her desk drawers. An oil-silk bag in which she kept her soap and nail-brush and tooth brush. Two clef-clef towels that belonged to Mrs. Puckett. A library book. A bank-book and a check book. A dime savings bank. A pair of rubbers and a folding umbrella. A pasteboard box filled with old letters and receipts. A box of writing paper and correspondence cards.

She had them all in the hatbox and was closing it when she heard the door open behind her. She swung around. Mark Nesbit was standing in the doorway.

He looked first at the open drawers of the desk and then at the hatbox.

"What do you think you're doing, Mary Faith?" His eyes seemed to take her in, point by point. The green hat, the expensive fur-trimmed suit, the gray slippers with their cut-steel buckles.

"I'm leaving," said Mary Faith.

Will Rogers Picks A Story For This Spot

By WILL ROGERS

IT'S TERRIBLE the way parents treat kids. If kids treated parents half as bad, you'd hear a lot more bawling than you ever get out of the youngsters. Why, I know folks that will hardly ever let a kid get up in the middle of the night and eat candy. For instance, And what harm could it possibly do anybody for a good, healthy boy to get up and eat a half pound of hard candy, if he feels like it? And this is only one way that the parents union has taken to make the kids unhappy.

Well, Georgie went to bed all right, and he was told that this time he mustn't call "Mother" at all after he was supposed to be asleep. No, he mustn't call for a drink of water, even. He must go right to sleep, because he had to get up early next morning and go to kindergarten.

"Kin I call you if I'm sick?"

"Oh, of course, you can always do that. But you don't look very sick."

In about ten minutes Georgie called, and Mother went to him.

"Say, Mother, I've got to tell you something important. I don't think I'll want any breakfast in the morning."

"No? Are you sick?"

"Well, not exactly. But I've got pains in my stomach that feel like I wouldn't want breakfast."

"All right, you needn't eat any more breakfast than you want to."

"Well, I was just thinkin'."

"Yes?"

"Wouldn't it be just as well for me to eat that big piece of coconut cake now, since I won't be wanting breakfast anyhow?"

The Housewife's Question Box

Question:—I want to waterproof the wall paper in my bathroom; how can I do it?

Answer:—Be sure there are no free nor torn edges where strips of wall paper join. Cover the clean, dry wall paper with spar varnish; brush the varnish on evenly. Try the varnish on an inconspicuous spot of the wall paper to see whether the colors are fast; this should be done first to determine whether or not the varnish can be used.

A Frame-Up

By IRVIN S. COBB

THE telephone rang in the office of the famous manufacturer of popular priced cars. The great man's secretary answered the ring. "Well?" he said.

"This," answered the voice, "this is Mr. Henry Begins. I wish to speak with Mr. Blank."

"Mr. Blank is very busy," explained the functionary. "This is his secretary speaking. Can I take the message?"

"You cannot," said the firm reply. "I must speak directly with your chief. I am a customer of your company and what I have to communicate is something which your employer should in person hear from me."

"Well, in that case, kindly hold the wire for a moment," said the secretary. He summoned Mr. Blank to the instrument.

"What is it?" inquired the latter gentleman.

"Mr. Blank," stated the unknown patron, "you advertised lately that your concern had turned out a complete car in six minutes."

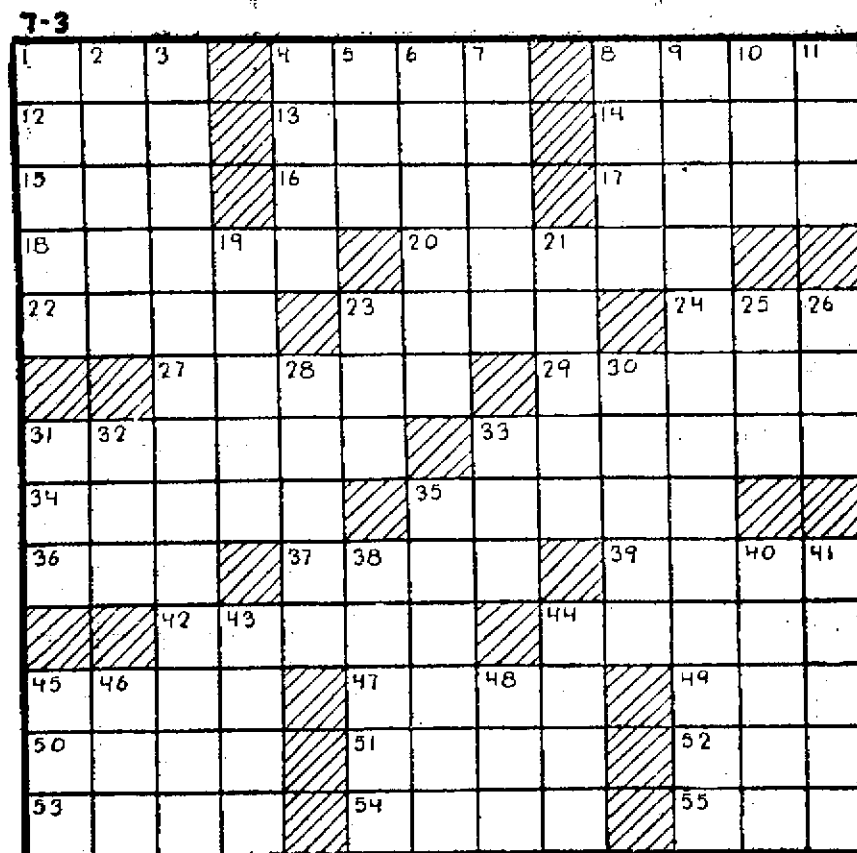

"Yes, we did. What of it?"

"Well, I'm the guy that bought it!"

Washington. — Articles ranging from telephone poles to clothespins are among the millions of objects made of wood which the present "metal civilization" finds indispensable. Even before the institution of the President's forestry camps, lumbering, measured by the number of persons engaged in it, was one of the largest industries in the United States, according to a bulletin of the National Geographic society.

"Lumbering and forestry, as they are at present practiced, vary widely in their aims although the cutting of wood is a factor in both," says the bulletin. "Lumbering is the term used for the cutting of timber for an immediate gain, while forestry carries the conception of long-time planning for continuous income. If trees are stripped carelessly from land, it is frequently left open to alternate floods and droughts. Much of it becomes worthless for agriculture or recreation and can support little animal life.

King's Son and Commoner Bride

The fact that he had just surrendered all his royal rights did not cast a shadow over the happiness of Prince Alfonso, eldest son of the ex-King of Spain, as he escorted his commoner bride, the former Edwina Sam-pedro, of Cuba, from the Sacred Heart Church, Ouchy, Switzerland, after their marriage. They plan to make their home in Lausanne.

LEST WE FORGET

157 years ago? Have we preserved to the people that liberty which the constitution said should forever be theirs? Have we mistaken license for liberty in any thing? Have we surrendered the principle of men being equal, for the sophistry that "public policy" demand the people give up their rights to a clique, or a class, or a faction which may set itself up as a Daniel to judge what is good for us and declare what is bad for us according to the standard of self-made righteousness?

It is said by the physiologist that the human body changes completely every seven years, and that the man of today is an entirely different body from that of thirty years hence. Is it true also of nations? Have we changed our body politic, and are we today but the bare shape of the liberty-loving freedom-guaranteeing body we were 157 years ago?

It would seem that we are but the same only in outward substance. We tax for luxurious waste and refinement now, where before we taxed for the support of a simply run and economically efficient government. We derive men and sections and states, ye, even the whole nation, of rights that by our forefathers were held inalienable, and we declare it is done by the "will of the people," and for their good. We build a high wall of protection around the business of the country and pamper combinations which demand from the people the last drachma, when our fathers threw down the barriers to trade and import and strived to build up and strengthen the whole people instead of making supermen of the few.

Still, we are the same American nation. We publicly hold to the same doctrines, and we have grown and thrived, until 157 years after our birth we are become the admired, not to say feared, of all nations.

It is well that we celebrate the natal day of the nation; but while we are celebrating it let us firmly resolve that if we have been led astray by false doctrines and schisms, if we are tending to that point in the orbit whereof a great historian wrote, "The history of republics is against them," let us take heed of our way and bring ourselves back to the path of democracy and the rule of the consented, so that future July Fourths shall mark the passing of this nation down the track of the years attended by a glory that is undimmed and with the confidence and support of all its people.

was burned to death and seven other persons injured, none seriously, when three automobiles figured in a collision and one burst into flames. The victim, who was unidentified, was believed to be a Pennsylvania salesman who had been in Columbus. Coroner John Thompson of Licking-co was investigating the accident today.

Frank Saul, 16-year-old Euclid boy, was killed when he was thrown from his bicycle after the driver of a truck to which Saul had been holding suddenly veered to the curb.

Roy Rice, seven-year-old New Miami boy was killed and his companion, Leonard Wilmot, 8, was near death after they were struck by an automobile driven by Ernst Ohlendorf, 36, of Cincinnati. The driver was free on $2,000 bond today on a manslaughter charge filed on the recommendation of Dr. Edward Cook, Butler-co coroner.

When an automobile and a motorcycle collided in Cincinnati, William Auferheide, 30, received injuries which caused his death a few hours later. Near Sidney, Walter McIntosh of Toledo was killed when his automobile skidded from the Dixie Highway and hit a pole.

The state's only death from drowning over the week-end was that of Orville Sullivan, 19, near Loveland in Warren-co. The youth, who lived in Russell Springs, Ky., was swimming in the Little Miami River.

Robin Pecks at Image
Until Screen Stops It

Richmond.—The widely publicized penchant of robins for attacking their images in mirrors or window panes for days at a time was exhibited here recently in a new light.

A robin perched outside the window of the home of Lloyd H. Williams recently saw what seemed to be another bird of the same species on the opposite side of the glass and forthwith began pecking away. Six days later he was still pecking.

Finally Williams became annoyed and placed a screen over the window, so that the bird was unable to see the reflection. With bill blunted by nearly a week of pecking, the robin flew away.

I'M ALWAYS hearing a lot about how hired girls ain't what they used to be. I reckon it's true, as far as that's concerned. But did you ever stop to think that maybe the folks that hire girls ain't what they used to be, either? It's a different kind of a world all around, ain't it? If hired girls was like they used to be, they'd be clean out of place in this here world.

There was a woman that had a cook, and she was afraid to bawl the cook out too much for fear she'd have to do some cooking her own self. Still, she couldn't keep still all the time. So she says one day:

"Gertie, I'll have to tell you something that's very important. My husband complained this morning that his eggs was cold and not half cooked, and his pancakes was cold and soggy, and his coffee was cold and weak, and the rolls were stale."

"Well, say," says Gertie, "you maybe think that's bad! But Lord bless your soul, after you've been married to him twenty years, like I been to my man, you'll get used to it! Don't pay no attention to him, I says!"
